Napoleonic Sequel Faces Hitler as Reds Repeat 1812 in City's Capture

Maloyaroslavets, Point of Beginning of Rout of French, Taken From Nazis

Sea Power Is Hit
British Say 3 U-Boats and Two Bombers Are Destroyed

(By The Associated Press)
A German sequel to Napoleon's disastrous retreat from Russia in the winter snows of 1812 stared Adolf Hitler in the face today as Soviet troops were reported to have recaptured the historic city of Maloyaroslavets, 65 miles south-west of Moscow.

It was at Maloyaroslavets that Czar Alexander I's imperial Russian army turned the tide in the Napoleonic invasion, compelling the French to fall back across the frozen steppelands with terrible losses.

Only 20,000 of Napoleon's original army of 500,000 troops got out alive.

A bulletin from Hitler's field headquarters complained anew of the bitter weather conditions, declaring:

"Defensive fighting in the central (Moscow) sectors continues despite intense cold."

On the same theme, the Berlin radio reported:

"In on battle on the central sector, the Bolsheviks attacked for four days and five nights without interruption. Our troops had almost no rest and this was in the severest cold and snowstorms."

Unconfirmed reports circulated in Sweden that the Germans were already building defenses along the Polish border, the jumping-off line of Hitler's attack on the U.S.S.R. last June 22.

Heavy Blows at Sea
Heavy blows to the Germans at sea were also announced by the British admiralty, which reported that at least three Nazi U-boats and two long-range bombers had been destroyed by the defenders of an Atlantic convoy.

More important than the destruction of the German raiders, the admiralty said over 90 per cent of the convoy, comprising more than 30 freighters, reached port safely after a four-day running battle.

Only two merchantmen in the big convoy, a protecting British destroyer and an auxiliary warship, were lost in beating off the assault, the admiralty said.

"An American built Liberator aircraft of the coastal command joined the convoy on the last day of the attack, December 21, and played a conspicuous part in the final series of counter-attacks which eventually freed the convoy from further attacks," an admiralty bulletin reported.

On the Soviet war front, the fall of Maloyaroslavets gave the Russians a base for exerting heavier pressure on German forces at Mozhaisk, 30 miles to the north of the Moscow-Smolensk highway, which was already being hampered by Red artillery fire.

Russian forces were officially credited with having killed 15,000 Nazi officers and men in the six-day period from December 26 to 31—an average of 2,500 daily—and a mid-day communique today reported 1,850 invaders annihilated in three local engagements.

Couple Dines in Private Dining Room; Later Bodies Are Found

Chicago, Jan. 3 (AP)—A St. Louis sales executive and his pretty woman companion were found dead early today in a private dining room of the smart L'Aiglon Restaurant after having had a $20 pheasant and champagne dinner.

Coroner A. L. Brodie said he was investigating the possibility of murder and suicide and double suicide after a cosmetic compact containing a crystalline substance was found in the room.

From cards found in the man's pockets, Brodie identified him as Clare McArthur, 45, vice president and general sales manager of the Missouri Portland Cement Company. The woman was identified as Mrs. Nancy Wassman, 34, of Chicago, a divorcee.

Dutch Have Taken View War to Go On for Long Time

Steadfastness of Holland's Fighters Is Brought Out by Incident at Dutch Airport

By FRED VANDERSCHMIDT (Wide World Analyst)

I have a dinner date in Amsterdam about seven years from now with a flying dutchman.

There is a fair chance that we will keep it. I have reason to believe that my friend escaped from The Netherlands after those few tragic days of battle in May of 1940 and made his way to the Dutch East Indies, and that he now is flying one of the American-built planes with which the Dutch have made such a shining record in four weeks of Pacific war.

The story of my dinner date with this Netherlands Air Force captain may help to show why he and others like him are among the most steadfast allies we have got.

I reached his station not far from the eastern Netherlands city of Groningen with difficulty a few months before the invasion. The road signs to the airport had been pulled down, in the naive belief that this would baffle the Germans when they invaded, but the old man who had inherited the toll concession on a sharp bend of the highway was still collecting tribute and, for all I know, demanded his six Dutch cents from the Germans when they came marching in.

Taken Over by Military
It was a small airport formerly used by civilian planes and it had been taken over completely by the military. It was about as far from the German border as downtown Manhattan is from Newark and it was in flat, unfortified country which was completely undefendable. It was blasted out of existence by the German Air Force within a few minutes in the early morning of May 10, 1940, and overruled within a matter of hours by German tanks.

The Dutch airforce unit based at the airport was a lost squadron in anybody's future book. Even before the invasion, the captain and his colleagues had about the most futile job I ever have run across. It was not quite a thankless job, however, because a shining little medal, just conferred by Queen Wilhelmina, dangled against the pale green of the captain's tunic.

We sat in the lounge of the airport building and talked about the German planes which had come across the Dutch border that morning, and every morning, on their way to the British coast to reconnoiter and sometimes to bomb. It was the captain's job to intercept them in defense of Holland's neutrality.

"What do you do when they come over?" I asked.

"We chase them, all of them," he said. "But they usually are over the North Sea by the time we get in the air. Sometimes we get them on their way back. Then it is very difficult."

Location Not Disclosed
The exact location of General MacArthur's new defense lines was not disclosed, but within the area remaining in control of the defenders north of Manila Bay is an important highway leading westward to the rugged, otherwise trackless Batan province, the link with the fortress of Corregidor and its subsidiary fortifications.

Also within the defense lines, which extend in an arc possibly 200 miles long from Manila Bay to the South China Sea coast, are the Olongapo naval base and possibly Fort Stotsenburg and Clark Field.

In territory left to them the defenders are favored by some of the most rugged terrain in the Philippines, varied by the swamps of the Pampanga river mouth.

On the slopes of Mt. Mariveles, which dominates the Batan province, the American troops repeatedly have carried out peace-time maneuvers anticipating the wartime development now shaping

War Councils Muster Full Power to Stave Off Jap Thrust at Singapore

Washington, Jan. 3 (AP)—American and Filipino troops fought on against awesome odds today to drain from Japan the fullest blood price for the Philippines and to hold off new Japanese blows to the south for as long as possible.

Although no official word of the struggle had been issued since the announcement yesterday of the fall of Manila and the Cavite naval base, military quarters expressed the belief that General MacArthur's forces were in position to keep up a prolonged fight.

In Washington, the war councils of the united nations sought to use every minute bought with the lives of MacArthur's men to bolster Singapore and the Dutch East Indies and to muster a mighty force for the eventual Pacific offensive.

Officials indicated that strategy had been the main concern of talks which culminated in announcement of the signing of the united nations agreement by the United States, Britain, China, Russia and the 22 other anti-Axis nations yesterday. They said other pronouncements of equal, if not greater, importance than the agreement might be expected within the next few days.

Masked from the Axis powers were military assurances Britain and the United States had obtained from Russia in the talks.

Through the wording of the united nations agreement, which pledged the 26 countries to use their full resources against Axis powers and adherents with whom each is now at war and to refrain from any separate peace or armistice, Russia was not bound to military action against Japan, which would now involve her on two fronts.

Yet, as Britain's Prime Minister Churchill continued to point out, the Russian menace still hangs over Japan. It keeps the Japanese from using their full force in southern Asia.

Observers pointed to Russia's signature on the united nations' agreement—with its adherence to the Atlantic charter and its declaration that complete victory over the Axis was essential "to defend life, liberty, independence and religious freedom"—as evidence that the Kremlin had abandoned the Soviet idea of Communist world revolution in favor of full cooperation with Washington and London.

Pending the development of a grand strategy which might involve Russian aid in the Pacific, the immediate concern of the united nations was to delay the Japanese campaign as much as possible.

Military quarters pictured MacArthur's withdrawal from Manila and consolidation of his limited forces north of the capital as a key development in the delaying action. They termed it the best maneuver open to him from the viewpoint of continuing the battle.

Behind the "strong positions" it was said to have taken up yesterday, the American-Filipino army is now believed able to fall back, if need be, slowly and in good order to the protection of the guns of the Manila Bay fortifications.

Axis Soldiers Captured by British in Libya

This long line of Axis soldiers represents prisoners taken by the British, the London war office says, during operations in Libya. They are being brought back from the forward areas in the desert by a single trooper of a British tank unit. As the fighting continued, British announced recapture of the seaport of Bardia, far to the east of the main Axis forces as the British pressed westward.

City Tire Rationing Board Gives Rules to Be Followed

Lehman Asks Pooling of Cars To Conserve Cars, Tires, Gas

Governor Would Have Rural, Urban Folk Work Out Plan to Aid Defense

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 3 (AP)—Local defense councils, at Governor Lehman's insistence, undertook today to bring about a pooling of private automobiles in rural and urban areas to conserve cars, tires and gasoline needed for the war effort.

Simultaneously, the state planned immediate pooling of its automobile and trucks. Mayors and heads of other governmental units were urged by the governor to work out a similar plan to share use of public-owned vehicles.

Asserting the tire rationing and the ban on new automobile sales until a rationing program commences January 15, will have "repercussions" upon civilian life, the governor added that "wisdom and prudence" demands an attempt to minimize such difficulties.

"Of course serious inconveniences will have to be endured. But this is war," he said.

"Accordingly," he announced last night, "I am directing all local defense councils to take an aggressive lead in stimulating private citizens in urban and rural areas to develop methods for the common use of their automobiles."

"Workers can get together and go to the factory in one auto instead of four. The same with commuters living in counties like Westchester, Nassau and Suffolk. Farmers can reduce trips to the village or city."

He appointed Conservation Commissioner Lithgow Osborne chairman of a committee to plan pooling of state-owned vehicles. Other members are J. Buckley Bryan, state budget director and Standards and Purchase Commissioner John T. Higgins.

Meantime, the governor announced that labor leaders and Republican and Democrat legislative chieftains agreed to introduction at the legislative session beginning Wednesday, on bills lengthening the work-day and work-week of men and women in defense industries.

Rationing Violators Face Severe Results

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 3 (AP)—Motorists violating regulations under which automobile tire and tube rationing becomes effective Monday, will face "severe punishment," the state rationing director ruled today.

Reminding that applications for certificates to purchase tires must be made under oath, Maurice F. Neufeld, state rationing director, added: "A person who knowingly files an untrue statement will be prosecuted. Tire rationing boards have been instructed to give full publicity to all violations."

In addition to possible criminal prosecution, violators also "may find themselves denied the right to receive any materials which are now being rationed or any further materials that may be rationed in the future," he declared.

ize "the unquestioned need for a broader delegation of legislative power" to the New York City council came from Council President Newbold Morris.

In a radio address over WMCA, Morris asserted the city "is without power or authority x x x to deal with many vital governmental problems x x x."

Nine Persons Are Killed in Illinois As Cars Collide; Two Others Injured

Staunton, Ill., Jan. 3 (AP)—Nine persons were killed and two others were injured critically near here last night in the worst automobile collision in the history of southern Illinois.

State highway police identified the dead as Mrs. Rose Woolsey, 21; Mrs. Winnie Pryor, 47, and her daughter, Marcella Pryor, 16, all of Alton, Ill., and Harold King, 20, of Kentucky, passengers in one of the cars; Lawrence Padock, Glen Carbon, Ill., driver of the second car; his one-year-old daughter, Carol Sue; Mrs. Clara Finley, 30, Cottage Grove, Ill.; Myra Cloys, 21, and Leroy Warren Frailey, 21, both of Alton.

At St. Joseph's Hospital in Highland were Harold Woolsey, 28, driver of the car in which his wife and three others were killed, and Mrs. Lawrence Padock. Attendees said their condition was so critical they could give no account of the accident. Both suffered internal injuries.

State patrolmen said the two machines apparently were traveling fast. Both cars were damaged badly and were found in a field 150 feet from the intersection. The mangled bodies were scattered along the roadbed. Harold Woolsey was the only one of the 11 passengers who was not thrown onto the highway, the patrolmen said.

China Says Third Changsha Battle Now Is Favorable

Army Statement Reports 15,000 Japanese Troops Killed or Wounded in Fights

Chungking, China, Jan. 3 (AP)—China officially claimed today a favorable and decisive turn in the third battle for Changsha, Hunan province capital, an army communique declaring 15,000 Japanese troops had been killed or wounded during Chinese counterattacks launched yesterday morning.

The "fierce battle of annihilation" still is raging, the Chinese communique announced.

It said most of the Japanese casualties were caused by tremendous artillery fire laid down by the Chinese, who were reported pressing the Japanese from all directions.

A force of Japanese plainclothesmen discovered at the eastern gate of Changsha was "machine-gunned and totally wiped out by the gallant defenders," the communique added.

Japan already has suffered two humiliating and serious defeats in attempts to capture and hold Changsha, a city of 300,000 population. Those defeats were in October, 1939, and September, 1941.

(A hint that the Japanese may be preparing for another setback at Changsha was seen in the Tokyo broadcast of a Japanese dispatch from Hankow quoting military quarters as saying the Japanese "may not occupy Changsha permanently as it was the purpose to crush Chinese resistance" in driving on the city. The Japanese claimed they occupied Changsha last night.)

In the present battle, the main Chinese forces now have been brought to bear on the invaders, the communique said, "from all directions." Previous reports have told of Chinese assaults between Changsha and Yochow, Japanese base 100 miles to the north, which threatened the Japanese rear.

The Chinese said yesterday the Japanese apparently were launching a general offensive against China.

"We welcome it," a spokesman said. "This enables us to dissipate the enemy's strength. Both sides must suffer, but the Japanese are at a disadvantage. They cannot afford to lose as much manpower as China."

No Salaries Provided For Six New Firemen

It is understood that in the 1942 tax budget to be submitted to the Common Council on Tuesday night that no provision has been made in the appropriation for the fire department to pay the salaries of the six new firemen who were appointed last Tuesday evening by the fire board, and who were to assume their duties on January 15.

Just what will happen between today and Tuesday night is not known but unless the fire board appropriation is increased sufficiently to cover the salaries of the six new firemen it is presumed that they will not assume their duties as planned.

The additional six firemen were appointed, it is claimed, to meet the requirements of the new state law that permits a paid fireman to work but 72 hours a week.

Fortress Is Only Partly Damaged

Mountain Forces Put Up Fierce Fight in Effort to Hold Off Japanese

Japanese Drives Upon Malaya Are Voided by British

(By The Associated Press)

U. S. anti-aircraft batteries beat off a violent five hour attack by Japanese planes upon Corregidor Island fortress at the entrance to Manila, the War Department said today, while on the nearby Batan peninsula, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's "last stand" army of American and Filipino troops still battled against Japanese invasion forces.

A War Department communique said at least three Japanese planes were shot down in the assault on Corregidor.

Tokyo reports said Japanese warships were also attacking the island stronghold.

A War Department bulletin said at least 60 Japanese planes took part in the raid but failed to inflict material damage on the fortress.

American casualties in the attack, which took place yesterday, were listed as 13 killed and 35 wounded.

"There was a marked lessening of enemy ground attacks," the communique said.

"American and Philippine troops were consolidated in new positions, where organized resistance to Japanese attacks will be intensified."

Imperial Tokyo headquarters acknowledged that the U. S. defense forces were putting up "desperate" resistance in the Batan mountains northwest of Manila but asserted they were doomed to annihilation within a short time.

To Japanese radio listeners, a Tokyo broadcast pictured Japanese troops as having captured Manila by storm, "braving furious fire"—giving a melodramatic portrayal of the city's fall in contrast to a U. S. War Department communique reporting that "all American and Philippine troops were withdrawn from the city several days ago."

According to the War Department version, the Japanese simply marched into the open, undefended city without resistance. Gen. MacArthur having withdrawn his forces.

Would Prevent Reinforcements
A German radio broadcast, quoting dispatches from Tokyo, said the attack on Corregidor was intended to prevent the arrival of reinforcements for Gen. MacArthur's beleaguered troops.

The broadcast also asserted that departing U. S. transports had been bombed by Japanese planes.

Corregidor fortress, bristling with 12-inch guns and powerful anti-aircraft batteries, lies 27 miles southwest of Japanese-occupied Manila.

"Japanese units are now concentrating their attack on the Batan peninsula and Corregidor Island," imperial Tokyo headquarters announced briefly.

The hard-pressed American defense forces, reported yesterday to have taken up "strong positions" on a shortened line north of Manila after the fall of the Philippine capital, were pictured today as fighting a delaying action in this second phase of the battle

Vichy Extends Emergency Law to Islands, but Has No Way of Enforcing

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Jan. 3 (AP)—The Vichy government today extended its wartime emergency law to apply to St. Pierre and Miquelon, French islands off Newfoundland and which have been occupied by Admiral Emile Muselier and his Free French forces.

The laws, providing penalties for activities jeopardizing the position of the state, also were applied to French Guiana and to the islands of Guadeloupe in the West Indies and Reunion in the Indian Ocean.

(Although the orders went onto the record, the Vichy government had no means of enforcing them in the colonies taken under control by Free French forces.)

Edelmuth Works On City's Budget

Several Changes Expected Before Submission

Mayor William F. Edelmuth has been busy since the first of the year preparing the 1942 tax budget for submission to the Common Council when it meets Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the council chambers in the city hall. It is understood that many of the items in the tentative budget filed by Mayor C. J. Heiselman have been materially cut.

It is said that the 1942 tax rate instead of being $45.49 as fixed by the tentative budget on which a public hearing was held the last week in December, will be approximately $44.

Mayor Edelmuth plans to mail copies of the proposed new budget to all members of the Common Council so that they will have the opportunity of studying the budget before it is submitted Tuesday evening.

There are certain fixed charges that were contained in the tentative budget that could not be changed. Among them is an increase of $40,000 in debt service; an increase in pensions, due to the city employing members of the state pension system, of $9,000; and an item of $7,000 for home defense. These three items alone account for approximately $56,000 of the new tax rate, it was stated today.

New York, Jan. 3 (AP)—Reinvestment demand in today's stock market again more than offset cloudy war news from the Far East and leading issues added fractions to more than a point to yesterday's rally.

While volume was less than half that of a week ago, the turnover of around 500,000 shares exceeded most Saturday's in 1941.

Rails, mail orders, sugars, farm implements, aircraft and specialties were the principal performers on the upside. Steels, motors and rubbers were relatively narrow. Oils generally failed to do much on the recovery push.

Agricultural commodities resumed the forward move which started Friday in response to the framing of price control legislation which would favor agricultural products. Carrier bonds were popular in the loan department.

Prominent shares in the front ranks most of the time—some eventually slipped—were Union Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Pennsylvania, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, J. C. Penney, Allied Chemical, Westinghouse, American Telephone, Western Union, J. I. Case, Caterpillar, Tractor, Fajardo Sugar, South Porto Rico Sugar, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft and Sperry.

Among the few laggards were Standard Oil (N. J.), United Aircraft and Goodrich.

May Clear Up Cases

The arrest in Kingston New Year's eve of Kenneth Ramsey and John Olson of Kingston, along with the arrest last Sunday of Donald Sickler of North Front street, is expected to clear up a number of burglaries of unoccupied houses and cottages in which Ruby and Sawkill areas on which Troopers Reilly and Judge have been working for some time it was said today. The troopers said that it appears apparent that Olson and Sickler were concerned in some of these burglaries at least, but that there was some question yet as to whether Ramsey had played any part in them. The troopers, and deputies from the sheriff's office have been on the trail of Olson and Ramsey for several days preceding their arrest Wednesday night, but the boys succeeded in eluding them. Sickler was arrested and held at the Ulster county jail following the tracing of some of the goods which had been stolen from the unoccupied houses.

Divorce Is Granted

Woodstock, Vt., Jan. 3 (AP)—The marriage of Dorothy Thompson, newspaper columnist, and Sinclair Lewis, author and playwright, has ended in divorce. She won the divorce, which will become absolute February 1, after testifying yesterday that she last saw Lewis in April, 1937, and that he had reiterated at that time a previously expressed desire to terminate their marital relationship. The decree was allowed under a statute providing that if a couple is separated for more than three years either party may sue for divorce. Custody of the couple's 11-year-old son, Michael, was awarded Miss Thompson. No financial arrangements were considered in the court.

Following the annual meeting Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy gave an interesting talk on air raid precautions, and refreshments were served.

Marines' Wagon Will Visit Area

All Interested May Go to Recruiting Station

"To all men who want to enlist in the U. S. Marines," said Sergeant Norman Smyle, recruiting officer in charge of the Poughkeepsie recruiting station, today "there will be a marine corps station wagon which will tour this area for the purpose of providing transportation to the recruiting station in Poughkeepsie for a physical examination."

Sergeant Smyle said that all men who have registered for selective service are still eligible to volunteer. The station wagon will visit the post offices in Kingston, Saugerties and Highland on each Monday and Saturday.

"If you see the truck going by," said Sergeant Smyle, "don't hesitate to stop the driver and ask for an application blank."

The sergeant said that U. S. Marine Corps were in need of men, and that now was the time to enlist for service. Any man who passes the physical examination may enlist in the reserve for the duration of the war, or can sign up for four years as a regular.

Editor Has Birthday

Frank A. Gallit, editor and owner of the Catskill Enterprise, on New Year's Day celebrated his 83rd birthday. Mr. Gallit, more familiarly known to his friends and associates as "Pop" carries his years lightly, and is daily to be found at his desk. A lover of sports, Mr. Gallit for many years was actively connected as player and manager of the Catskill baseball team, which gave the village the best in this sport. Mr. Gallit still takes a keen interest in the national pastime. He has also been an excellent bowler and can still chalk up scores with the best of them. Older baseball fans will recall the days when Gallit and his team played the game.

New York, Jan. 3 (AP)—Francis X. Belley, 45, captain of waiters at Leon and Eddie's restaurant, was found clubbed to death in his Riverside Drive apartment and police early today took three persons to headquarters for questioning. A medical examiner said death apparently was due to several fractures of the head and one under the right eye, and that Belley had been dead about 24 hours. Belley had been with the West 52nd street restaurant seven years. He came from Quebec.

Cancels Convention

Oklahoma City, Jan. 3 (AP)—The executive committee of the Oklahoma Firemen's Association cancelled its annual convention and voted to hold defense bonds with the $12,000 to $15,000 it would have cost to entertain the usual 1,500 visiting firemen.

The Berlin radio frankly described white-cloaked Soviet ski troops as "the invisible menace."

In the Crimea, Soviet dispatches said Russian forces which drove the Germans from Kerch and Feodosiya had recaptured 19 more settlements in pursuit of the Germans, who now were apparently falling back toward their main siege armies around Sevastopol naval base.

Bardia Is Taken

On the North African front, both the German and Italian high commands acknowledged the British capture of Bardia, Axis stronghold near the Libyan-Egyptian frontier.

British dispatches said South Africa's infantrymen, supported by British tanks, stormed the stubbornly-defended fortress in "a moonlight bayonet attack," capturing more than 5,000 Axis defenders and freeing 1,150 British soldiers imprisoned there. German Major Gen. Schmidt, chief staff officer of the Nazi "Panzer Africa," was among the Axis prisoners taken.

Premier Mussolini's high command said other Axis forces still held out at nearby Salum.

A British spokesman said there was no further change in the main battle sector in western Libya, where Gen. Erwin Rommel's battered armies have taken a new stand around Agadabia, 90 miles south of Bengasi.

While rejoicing in the final capture of Bardia and its Axis garrison in the Libyan campaign yesterday, Britain admitted the loss of the 7,175-ton cruiser Neptune and the destroyer Kandahar in Mediterranean operations.

A London communique said the Neptune, the 12th British cruiser officially acknowledged sunk during the war, had been sent to the bottom by a mine. The Kandahar, the 56th destroyer victim, was reported sunk by British forces after she was damaged by a mine.

The Italian high command had listed the Neptune as a torpedo plane victim, and said Christmas Day that her sailors had been found near Italian shores, "brought in by the tide."

Resignation of Henri Lagarde as president of the special Riom court created to hear France's long-delayed war guilt cases led German writers to report "belief that influential forces are at work trying to postpone the trial until after the war."

General Maurice Gamelin and former Premier Edouard Daladier and Leon Blum are among pre-armistice leaders held as defendants.

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, JANUARY 3, 1942.

DOOMED TO WALK

With the announcement of the ban on sales of automobiles and trucks, it begins to dawn on the American people that their great private transportation system is going to shrivel from now on, at least while the war lasts.

The Office of Production Management has placed a complete ban on the retail sale of new passenger automobiles and of light and heavy trucks. The order "freezes" all stocks in the hands of dealers until January 15 by which time a rationing system similar to that being applied to new tires, is scheduled to be abolished. The action is preliminary to a cessation of production of new passenger cars and light trucks for ordinary civilian use.

Millions of us have forgotten how to get around in any way except by stepping into an automobile and turning a key and pressing down our right foot and turning a wheel this way and that. And many of us, lucky enough to be well stocked with cars and tires when the government cracked down on rubber and steel, may still follow that procedure if the war doesn't last too long.

But most people will be feeling the pinch in 1943, if not sooner. And millions of us will find ourselves, one of these months, in the amazing situation of actually using, to get to work and around generally, the physical means that God has given us for that purpose.

Maybe it's just in time. For there is such a thing as evolution. It's hard to say just how fast that principle works, but possibly another decade or two of riding instead of walking would have left us incapable of physical locomotion and entirely dependent on machinery. In short, the war may have saved our legs for us. Also our general physical vigor, if we are wise enough to use freely now whatever there is left of it.

THE FIGHTING DUTCH

The Dutch seem to be the greatest boy scouts in military history. They count that day lost whose low-descending sun views at their hands no worthy action done. Their idea of a good deed is to sink a Jap ship, and they have consistently sunk at least one a day ever since that Far East war started.

Their contribution to the good cause has been all the more welcome because, for some reason or other, not much had been expected of them. The other combatants and the world in general seemed to assume that they would just stall along and do a little for the general cause here and there and now and then. Instead, they have come right to the front and been the most consistent and persistent performers in the Far-Eastern drama.

They have reason for fighting hard because, in the Dutch Indies, they have a great, rich domain to preserve. In doing it they are preserving their own home, for they are committed those Far-Eastern islands as fully as our own ancestors were committed to America in pioneer times.

They were steeled to fight all the more because their European homeland was under the iron heel of the Destroyers. And it might have been assumed, from Dutch history, that they would prove their mettle. Even so, the stubborn and aggressive action of those East Indian colonists has been an eye-opener. And they have fought as hard and effectively for their British, Filipino and American allies as for themselves.

When the final honor roll is called, they will doubtless stand as high as any. And in the meantime they set a glorious example.

A LOSING BUSINESS

It takes Germany a pitifully long time to learn that war as a business doesn't pay.

Many will challenge such a characterization of the national struggles in which Germany has been engaged, but the record of the three big wars launched by Germany in the last three-quarters of a century seems clear. The Prussian War of 1870-71 was deliberately launched by Bismarck for profit, although he tricked the French government into declaring war first. That brought a big indemnity and extension of territory. The World War launched in 1914, as our generation knows, was a greater effort for expansion and domination. The present thrust under Hitler is an incredibly bold effort to conquer and loot the world, using modern technology and military power to make all nations work for the Fatherland.

Of these three consecutive efforts the first succeeded, the second failed, and the fate of the last now hangs in the balance, with the United States apparently destined to play a dominant role. It will fail, too, leaving the misguided German people poor and hopeless, with millions of dead and wounded, their world trade gone, their resources exhausted, their treasury bankrupt, their former friends alienated. What's the use?

It's queer, too, that the Japanese should deliberately wreck cities they expect to annex. That's very unthrifty.

With the dictatorship nations war is regular business; with us it's an unpleasant interlude.

The British keep their thumbs up and we keep our chins up.

We dunno about Vichy. It always seems to be frothing up and flattening out.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

TREATING BEHAVIOR SYMPTOMS

The fact that the life span has been so greatly increased in recent years is due to the knowledge children's specialists have learned about food. Instead of thousands of young lives ending before the 'second' summer, the great majority now live a normal life span. Twenty-five years ago about three in every ten children died at childbirth or during the first year; today the number is about one in twenty.

While saving a child's life by prescribing the right kind and amount of food is most important, the children's specialist today is helping to guide the emotional side of the child's life. It is this guidance that helps the youngster to become a normal man or woman in the days to come.

When treating the child for physical ailments, the physician has ample opportunity to study the emotions because the emotions have much to do with the child's physical health.

In an article in Archives of Pediatrics (children's diseases), Dr. Joseph Solomon points out that physicians are taking note of the psychiatric or behavioral aspect of child care, combining the treatment of any existing physical disorders with the necessity of handling the 'individual as a whole'. He must know the underlying attitudes of the parents, of the home and the whole circumstances of the home insofar as they affect the child's relationships to the other members of the family.

The physician can thus see any little behavior symptoms as to when and how they start, and be in a position to "allay anxieties and anticipate difficulties."

"Most behavior difficulties of children are reflections of some underlying unhealthy attitudes within the home. The child's behavior upsets the parent who gets so angry that he or she is not emotionally fit to handle the situation and the child, at its most impressionable age, gets ideas that will be 'unusual' when he is older."

Dr. Solomon suggests that the physician do as much as possible with the child and that the social worker connected with the psychiatric clinic do as much as possible for the parent or parents in pointing out how their own behavior and home surroundings may be affecting the child's behavior.

RED CROSS PLEADS

The Red Cross is starting this week its great campaign for fifty million dollars. This is for war work; not for some foreign country, not for England or Russia or China, but for America, for our own country, for our own people. This is the first time that is going to give to our boys in the service hospitalization if they are ill, surgery and help while they are engaged in their arduous wartime duties. This is the fund that is needed to care for civilian relief, the women and children and aged persons who are bombed out of their homes by ruthless attacks such as were made within the month on Pearl Harbor and the Philippines.

Through American generosity the Red Cross has given millions to war sufferers in other lands. Now American lives have been lost, American homes have been attacked, American soldiers and sailors need the surgical dressings, the life giving blood plasma, and all the other services the Red Cross has given to stricken and unfortunate peoples all over the globe. Now that the Red Cross is on a war-time basis, give generously for the defense of your own land, for the comfort and help of your own brave soldiers and sailors, and for the relief of those who are made homeless by the barbaric attacks of an invader. Give generously and give quickly. Remember, "he gives twice who gives quickly."

BABSON ON BUSINESS

WAR AND RETAIL TRADE

Babson Says Blackouts and Other Factors Will Retard Sales

New York City, January 3.—In my annual forecast, which has just been published in this paper, I was not very optimistic on the outlook for retail trade. As we settle into our war economy, retail establishments will be both helped and hurt. I have already stated that the expansion of the draft age will have a dampening effect on retail trade and consequently on some industries. It is this theme which I wish to enlarge upon in my column today.

INITIAL EFFECTS

Coming almost at the height of the Christmas holiday shopping season, our entrance into a fight with air raid scares on both coasts, set retail trade sharply back on its heels. Department store sales in the Atlantic and Pacific areas immediately slumped badly. Actual blackouts on the Pacific Coast, which the Atlantic seacoast avoided, also contributed to the decline. Fortunately, shoppers recovered their sense of perspective rather quickly. When year-end totals are added, merchants in these areas will probably be well satisfied with Christmas results.

The vast middle sections of the country were not affected by this initial hysteria. However, their time will come. The East and West coasts are far better organized for air raids and for home defense than are the cities of the Middle West. The unexpected raids may take place in such cities as Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis, or Minneapolis. It is possible, but I don't say probable, for German air men to hole up gradually in the mid-hinterlands of Canada adjacent to Hudson Bay until the time comes to strike with lightning suddenness on our Mid-West areas. In due time cities in the Midwest must resort to blackouts with resultant bad effects on retail trade.

DEFENSE vs. NON-DEFENSE CITIES

Wherever and whenever you find rising payrolls and more employment you naturally find more spending and more money in circulation. This is true for defense areas. In my forecasts for certain individual cities, I was more optimistic over the outlook for retail trade for 1942 if they were tied into our Armament Program than I could be for cities which were not so fortunately situated and which had to come under a non-defense classification. For the country as a whole, these areas will just about balance out with, however, any difference on the down side. Hence, on the whole I do not expect retail trade to be so good in 1942 as it was in 1941.

When I think of the vast proportion of available spending money which will be siphoned off by the Government at its source for the purchase of Defense Bonds and for the payment of all kinds of taxes, I wonder how much will be kept for retail trade. Hence, I felt justified in recommending to retailers that they must increase their advertising appropriations if they expect good business in 1942. Selling in general had not been difficult in recent months. Department stores and other retail establishments have been filled with plenty of buyers. Fear of inflation and a belief on the part of many that goods might be worth more than money has boosted sales.

COMPETITION AND BLACK-OUTS

More lately the idea of a scarcity of consumer goods generally has prevailed. Yes, people have been buying freely. They have not had to be "sold." Retailers have enjoyed partially a justified rise in business and partially an artificial boom. Sales organizations in many lines have been breaking up. I point to the retail automobile distributors, fuel oil sales forces, and others. From here on what with real scarcities in consumers goods, rationing, standardization, and limitations on prices, competition will increase. The larger merchants in particular must use every promotional device at their command to bolster their gross business. Advertising is the most natural and powerful force to break up the coming buyers, "sit-down" strike.

There seems to be a feeling in New York City that blackouts will not be allowed this winter. The argument is that they will cripple business and serve no great purpose in a large city. I cannot believe this. On one of my trips to London two years before the war started, the technique was then being practiced. England owed much to the blackout. In my judgment it will become a part of our life here in many cities. The West Coast has the jump on the rest of the country but the East Coast is catching up.

ADVICE TO SHOPPERS

Retail sales of paint, heavy curtains, opaque cloth, flashlights, candles, indoor games, radios, records, and books will be heavy for a time. Railroad passenger and freight traffic will increase, while bus and motor freight traffic will decrease. Shop windows and illuminated signs will be darkened and kilowatt sales of electric power in certain areas may drop.

As more industries switch to armament work, as is witnessed by the January decline in automobile and radio output, some unemployment will result. Until certain readjustments can be made in our fighting war economy, retailers will have to live on milk in stead of cream. Wise buyers will shop now for essentials and wise retailers can attract them by judicious and food-taste advertising.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

After a number of interested women had been discussing the advisability of organizing a Y. W. C. A. in Kingston for some time the organization was formally effected at a largely attended meeting held in the auditorium of the Kingston High School on Wednesday evening, April 25, 1923, when a board of directors was elected.

The directors selected were: Dr. Mary Gage Day, Mrs. C. V. Dickinson, Mrs. W. N. Fessenden, Mrs. Joseph M. Fowler, Miss Edna Halwick, Miss Carolyn Hermann, Mrs. F. J. Higginson, Miss Sarah Horton, Miss Willa Hyde.

Mrs. William C. Kingman, Miss Emily Krieger, Mrs. Ida LeFevre, Mrs. E. F. MacFadden, Mrs. Elsie Myer Pultz, Mrs. George F. Rice, Miss Jennie Riseley, Miss Nan Rodie, Mrs. M. S. Safford, Mrs. Seth Staples, Mrs. Frank W. Thompson, Miss Alma Tyler and Mrs. J. Allan Wood.

At the organization meeting it was announced that the Y. W. started off with 1,275 pledged members.

It was also stated that the use of Mechanics' Hall on Henry street, had been obtained for temporary quarters. It is interesting to recall that the Y. W. has continued to be located there.

Speaking of Mechanics' Hall, I wonder how many of the older readers recall the days when Kingston had two telephone companies, the old Hudson River Telephone Company, and the old Standard Telephone Company, which before the days of the first World War was absorbed by the New York Telephone Company.

Shortly after the Standard was taken over by the New York Telephone Company, the Standard's building on Henry street was purchased by Charles DeWitt Council, Jr. O. U. A. M. for lodge rooms and club rooms.

The building was remodeled and Charles DeWitt Council still meets there.

It is also interesting to recall that in reading the list of the first directors of the Y. W. that many of the women named are still active in the work of the association.

Nations Who Have Signed United Front Against Axis Have Bolstered Morale at Opportune Time

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Jan. 3.—Maybe the timing was accidental and maybe deliberate but the fact remains that announcement of the solidarity of 26 nations in pledging their "full resources, military and economic" in the struggle "for victory over Hitlerism" came at a time when the American government was also announcing the loss of the capital of the Philippine Islands to the Japanese invaders.

The incident illustrates the importance of morale. Bad news is usually not a surprise. It has been anticipated for several days that Manila would fall. But coincidentally the effort to bind 26 nations together in a solemn pact against a separate peace was started several days ago and really grew out of the visit of Prime Minister Churchill to the United States.

The show of unanimity was especially important in view of rumors that Russia might be asked to make a separate peace as happened in the last war. It was important, too, to show the subjugated peoples of Europe that notwithstanding the first reverses, the anti-Axis nations are unshaken in their determination to do everything in their power to defeat the Axis nations.

The pact was worded carefully so that Russia would not become involved in any specific declaration against Tokyo. The language used was to pledge each government to employ its full resources "against those members of the tripartite pact and its adherents with which such government is at war."

Thus Russia is not at war with Japan and may not be for some time to come for strategic reasons. It was desired, therefore, not to give Japan a provocation to war against Russia. The Moscow government's position is fully understood by both Britain and the United States.

The 26 nations include not only the British group of commonwealths and the United States but the various Latin American governments as well as the so-called governments in exile. This means that in due time these governments and the personnel they designate will be recognized at the peace conference table.

The signing of the anti-Axis pact is not only a preparation for the time when the conquered peoples of Europe are liberated and some sort of order must be set up, but it is a means of notifying ing governments not yet in the war that there exists a solid group of governments—and organization to which a neutral government may at any moment adhere simply by signing the document.

The new treaty covers only a few paragraphs but it must be read alongside of the broader statement of war aims which are known as the Atlantic Charter. This was the agreement first signed by Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt last summer off the Maine coast.

The pledge to "defend life, liberty, independence and religious freedom and to preserve human rights and justice in their own lands as well as in other lands" is sufficiently inclusive to enable amplification by the envoys to the peace conference whereby this war is some day ended.

It will be noted that Ireland is not a signatory to the pact but that all other members of the British family of nations have subscribed. In due time the signature of Ireland may be expected, for it is not beyond here that Ireland will be able to maintain her neutrality when the war reaches more intensive stages.

The news of the new anti-Axis pact will spread throughout the world. It has gone over the wires and radio and cables. The fact that a solemn resolution has been taken to fight the war as "a common struggle against savage and brutal forces seeking to subjugate the world" will be interpreted far and wide as a supreme alliance—possibly the most powerful of all times—designed not merely to win a victory but to set up a new world organization to maintain peace.

What will be the position of Italy, Germany and Japan in such a world system? What will be the position of the smaller nations which have not adhered to the pact? The latter will have little voice in the peace arrangements but it is not likely that they will be jeopardized thereby, for it is realized that "neutrality" today is a matter of coercion by the Axis powers in those instances where Axis power is nearby.

As for the Axis powers they will be eventually disarmed and, judging by public declarations already made, they will be kept disarmed by means of an international police force. The new treaty is intended to be the death warrant for the militaristic cliques which have led Germany, Japan and Italy into a world war.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett

WASHINGTON—The war has made more changes in diplomatic circles than it has in the map of the world—but none stranger than that which has brought round, graying Maxim Litvinov in to the Washington spotlight as one of the most popular figures in the nation's capital.

If this were Hollywood, it would be a safe bet that only President Roosevelt and Winston Churchill (during his visit) would be any more sought after by the autograph hounds than the smiling ambassador from the U. S. S. R., who, because he also holds the title of Deputy Commissar for Foreign Affairs, outranks all diplomats here with the single exception of the British ambassador, Lord Halifax, who likewise has retained his status as a member of the British cabinet.

That, however, is a protocol rating and has nothing to do with the fact that ex-revolutionary, one-time exile in Siberia, and, again, out-again favorite of Josef Stalin, rates tops in popularity with official and unofficial Washington.

The capital press corps especially has placed its approval stamp on the man from the communist-land and there's good reason for it. In his conferences in the big Sixteenth Street embassy, Litvinov greets the ladies and gentlemen of the press with a big smile that deepens the creases in his heavily lined face and threatens to displace his oval-shaped spectacles.

His manner is easy. It impresses one as being more frank than that of official spokesmen of our even more firmly established allies in the war on the Axis. At times it is almost confidential.

When a question treads too close to subjects he does not wish to discuss, he displays a Russian genius for skirting the issue without seeming to refuse an answer. That kind of double dealing, the newspaper men can understand—and appreciate.

It is difficult to say if, in taking over the reins here, Litvinov has made any great difference in the running of the embassy staff. One who should know, assures me that the new house staff is happier than it has been since the United States shifted from a cold shoulder to an outstretched hand in its attitude toward the Soviets.

Certainly the diplomatic relations between the United States and the Soviet Republics seem to be functioning smoothly, for the latching is nearly always out for Litvinov both at the State Department and the White House. While there is no evidence that the new Russian ambassador has the taken Russia as a boss, neither President Roosevelt or Secretary of State Hull, neither is there any that he is in the least persona non grata, a state in which his predecessor, Constantin A. Oumansky, frequently found himself.

In other respects, Litvinov differs radically from the former host of the Russian embassy. Oumansky's functions were primarily social and titular. His job apparently was to keep up what contact he could with a nation that frowned on his own and maintain a brave front with the representatives of other nations who were more friendly.

Litvinov, on the other hand, is considered Russia's greatest diplomat, in spite of his two years in disfavor with Stalin before he came to this country. His assignment to the now world capital of allied resistance to the Axis powers is full of responsibilities. He works hard and long.

For that reason and one other, there is not much social activity around the Russian embassy these days and the ambassador and the staff are doing no more pink-teasing than their most urgent obligations demand. The other reason is that Madame Litvinov, who before her marriage was Ivy Lane, an English woman, has been ill ever since her arrival in this country.

Food Tips

FROM THE COOKBOOKLETS

DRESS UP FISH DISHES WITH SAUCES FOR TASTY VARIATION

A repertoire of interesting sauces marks a woman as a clever cook. That extra touch of flavor—that something "different" is often the result of a racy sauce or spicy stuffing. The new Cookbooklet, "250 Fish and Sea Food Recipes," latest release in The Freeman's series, devotes an entire chapter to special stuffings and sauces for fish.

Almost any kind of fish can be enhanced with a rich sauce. You'll want to vary your fish courses with some of the interesting suggestions like Creole Sauce, Cucumber Sauce, Matre D'Hotel Butter and many others.

Here is a classic sauce that goes well with almost any kind of baked, fried, broiled or boiled fish:

Tartare Sauce
1 teaspoon minced onion
2 teaspoons chopped sweet pickle
1 teaspoon chopped green olives
½ tablespoon minced capers
1 tablespoon minced parsley
¾ cup mayonnaise

1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar
Drain first five ingredients thoroughly and fold into mayonnaise. Add vinegar.

A savory stuffing for a good sized baked fish is this one:

Dill Stuffing
¾ cups soft bread crumbs
2 teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons minced onion
¼ cup melted butter
¼ cup chopped dill pickles
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Be sure to see the attractive simulated leather binder, especially designed to hold all 20 Cookbooklets. It keeps your household library clean and handy—you'll want one. They cost only 59c each—add 11c for postage and handling if you order by mail.

To obtain each of the Cookbooklets, present one coupon from the Kingston Daily Freeman with 13c at any outlet mentioned therein. To order by mail send one coupon and 16c for each booklet (13c for book and 3c for postage) to Cookbooklet Dept., Kingston Daily Freeman, Freeman Square, Kingston, N. Y.

Baked fish with brown almond sauce will make dinner on any night of the week a gala occasion. Unusual sauces and stuffings to add new interest to fish dishes are recommended in the latest Cookbooklet, now available.

NO TIME FOR LOVE

By WATKINS E. WRIGHT

YESTERDAY: Lavinia is only twenty-four, but she has definitely ruled men out of her life. Partly this is because she thinks her Aunt Dorcas wants her to, and partly it is because she wants a career as a buyer in a big department store—and has it. Yet Zoe, her roommate, is out there proposing to while she sits home and reads. And Freddy has a car. So she calls him and asks him to take her out Sunday. But to the Brooklyn Museum!

Chapter Three

Love In The Automat

ZOE was right. Peter Raymond did ask her to marry him. It was while they were dancing in a place just off Broadway. And now it was much later, and they were having some food in the Automat on Fifty-second Street. Zoe was eating chocolate pie and drinking tea, and Pete was drinking coffee and eating a tuna fish sandwich.

"Oh boy!" Pete said softly, reaching for Zoe's hand. "Engaged!"

"Yes," said Zoe, smiling at him. "Engaged in the Automat! It's wonderful, darling."

"It seems like a sort of dream," said Pete, going back to his sandwich, "being engaged to you, I mean. There were so many fellows rushing you around I hardly dared hope you'd ever be willing to marry me."

"Pete, you're sweet!" said Zoe. She let her adoring eyes feast upon Pete's dark good looks. "A girl plays around with men just for fun—because she hates to think she's not popular with them; but when the right one comes along, she—well, she just tosses all the others out of the window."

"I wish I could kiss you right this minute!" said Pete, a huskiness in his voice.

"So do I," said Zoe. "Only Automats are hardly places for kissing."

"Well, one thing is certain, we won't always be eating in places like this. When we're married, and I get my raises, we'll celebrate, go to El Morocco, the Rainbow Room, the Silver Slipper."

"But I like the Automat, Pete, really I do," Zoe smiled across her cup. "Besides, we had a wonderful time dancing before we came here. And didn't you know that it's quite the thing now to come to the Automat after the theater, and late at night after dancing? Look, here's a man now in a silk hat and the woman with him is wearing ermine!" She giggled. "Ermine in the Automat."

"Sounds like a title or something."

"Yes, it does," said Zoe. "only don't make a mistake and say vermin."

"You're wonderful, Zoe," said Pete. "I mean, enjoying being with a man, even if it's only eating in Automats and sitting in balcony seats. Most girls—especially those who work—seem to think a man ought to spend a young fortune on them."

Big Plans
"Oh, women in the business world give me a pain!" said Zoe. "Most of them ought to be fired, and made to marry and run homes."

"You really mean that?"

"Certainly do. And I'm tickled to death to be getting out of business. Pete, I'm going to make a good wife, or know the reason why?" Zoe suddenly remembered all that Lavinia had said about raises, advancements, babies, illness, and apartments in the Bronx. "Pete," she went on, "you do think you love me enough to—stand set-backs? I mean struggles—and maybe being hard up at times?"

"You bet I do!" said Pete with emphasis. "Gosh, honey, don't start crossing bridges."

"I know it sounds unromantic," to give you so much of my time."

"Never mind, sweetheart. In a little while you'll be leaving Lavinia to come live with me."

The Orphanage
I KNOW, and it will be heavy for me. "Only I do worry about Lavinia. I keep remembering how close we've been. I remember how I wept the day her Aunt Dorcas came to take her away from the orphanage; and I keep wondering if Lavinia will feel the same way when you come for me."

"Nonsense! Lavinia's too wrapped up in her work to have any real emotions about people."

Pete drained his cup, and set it down. "Funny, her aunt letting her go to the asylum in the first place."

"She didn't know about it," Zoe explained. "Miss Dorcas was off in the wilds of a jungle when Lavinia's parents died. But when she returned to the States she lost no time in doing something about it. She took Lavinia away from the orphanage and put her in a private school. She's been swell to Lavinia ever since, although she's not seen her for years."

"And then you got out also, thank God," said Pete reverently.

"Yes, I had a little cash left. I'm an uncle who hadn't bothered to get me out sooner, and I took a business course. Like a lot of girls, I came to New York and—"

"And you and Lavinia—the two orphans—fell upon each other's necks," said Pete. "A reunion—an apartment together—and me falling in love with the loveliest of the two!"

"We've done pretty well, too, for a couple of orphans," said Zoe. "If I do say so as shouldn't."

"You bet you've done well! But there's one little orphan I'm going to take care of from now on."

"That," said Zoe, "is all any little orphan could ask!"

It was when they were saying good night in the vestibule of the walk-up apartment house where Zoe and Lavinia lived that Zoe suddenly remembered something.

"Pete, do you like flowers?"

"Sure, I do," said Pete. He held Zoe close, noticing the way her lashes made shadows upon her cheeks. "Why do you ask?"

"Because I'd like a geranium," said Zoe.

"A geranium? Why?"

"To sit on the window sill," said Zoe. "There's something so homey about a geranium on the window sill of an apartment in the Bronx."

"You bet I do!" said Pete with emphasis. "Gosh, honey, don't start crossing bridges."

"I know it sounds unromantic,"

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

(Author of "Etiquette," "The Personality of a House," "The Basic Book of Social Usage," etc.)

TRAIN-BEARS ARE OKAY, BUT NOT VERY PRACTICAL

A young woman asks me whether there is any rule of good taste that has caused train-bearers at a wedding to go out of fashion or whether it is quite proper to have them. She is interested in this because unless she has train-bearers she can think of no way to take her 4-year-old twin nephews to her wedding. A postscript asks, "They couldn't be flower boys, could they?"

In answer I at least can assure her that train-bearers are in perfectly good taste, but not very practical since they necessitate a court train. Lifting any other type of train is not only ugly, but would risk hobbling the bride's ankles. The real objections to a court train are formality and expense.

You could call the children "pages" and have them walk ahead of you just as little flower girls do. The idea of boys' carrying baskets of flowers would hardly be suitable, but you can overcome empty hands by having them carry a rope of flowers. This actually would be a good idea, but it would give the appearance of one length when the children walk together with clasped hands, but make two short lengths when they separate at the chancel.

To keep them from dropping the ends, the garlands should be tied a few inches from their ends, so the children's wrists so that they either could hold them or let go. All they have to do is to hold hands when walking together in the procession.

Visiting A Sick Employer
Dear Mrs. Post: My employer has been very ill. When he was at his worst in the hospital, the office sent him flowers. And we sent flowers once after that when he got home. But none of us have been to see him. He is not really sick any more but has to stay home and rest for some time to come.

We wondered whether we might go to see him. If so, do you think we ought to telephone his house first, or just stop at the house and ask to see him?

Answer: It might be best I think, to telephone first, and ask to speak to his wife—or to his nurse—and ask her whether she thinks he is well enough and would like to see you. I suppose you mean only a few of you would go at a time.

Half-Way Clothes
Dear Mrs. Post: My husband and I are invited to a big evening wedding, but as we are invited only to the church we don't want to bother to dress in evening clothes if we don't have to. And yet, we would like to go to the wedding. I understand there is going to be a very large reception afterwards and so I suppose most of the guests in church will be in evening dress. What could we wear so as not to look conspicuously different?

Answer: Your husband would have to wear a tuxedo and you a semi-evening

There can be a heap of grieving while the hair is growing gray.

When no one throws a party, and no one wrecks a bus, And no one gets arrested for stirring up a fuss; When no one starts a fire, and no one weeps or wails— Ah! Alberta, Canada, license plates white on black, bear these words: "Drive safely." An everyday, every mile wise admonition.

Jake (he leaned over the garden fence)—I say old fellow. I understand that you have Thompson's new snow shovel.

John—Yes, I have.
Jake—Good. If you'll let me borrow that occasionally I'll let you use Smith's lawn mower whenever you need it.

Where Some of the Gas Goes
Taxicabs in the United States carry more than 780,000,000 passengers a year.

New Lodger (sarcastically)—Is that all the soap there is in the room?

Landlady (decidedly)—Yes, sir, all I can allow in one room.

New Lodger—Well, I'll take two more rooms. I've got to wash in the morning.

Every holiday proves that the highway engineers did not know their business when they designed roads. Anybody can see now that the roads should be wider, not longer.

Motorists should not take the government warning too lightly for there is nothing more certain than that there will be rationing if there is not voluntary reduction of gasoline by the owners of private cars.

Visitor (from London)—Your sky here seems so much clearer than ours in London.

New York taxicab driver—Sure, you see, we have skyscrapers here.

We are a roving restless people. If you doubt it, look at the state license tags on the passing car.

Teacher pointed out that a surname often indicated the trade of the ancestors of those who bore the name. He gave, as examples, Smith, Taylor, Baker and others. Then he questioned one of the boys.

"What were your ancestors, Webb?"

"Spiders, sir."

Our highway patrolmen are rendering us a great service and we are proud of them.

Pertinent Facts On Conscription

The War Department has revoked its former instructions permitting members of the National Guard and of the Enlisted Reserve Corps, who have been discharged or released from active service, to volunteer for return to service, and now states that all such men will be recalled to active duty not later than February 1, 1942.

Brigadier General Ames T. Brown, New York State Director of Selective Service, reported today.

If the men had at least three months of active Federal service during the two-year period immediately prior to reporting for duty, they will be sent direct to their former units, if practicable, and if such components are still within the continental United States.

The men recalled will be given their former rank.

General Brown stated there has been a rush of National Guardsmen to return to active service, with assignment to former units, and the new order does not change the situation except to require the discharged and released men to await their orders of recall rather than volunteer for return to duty.

To Repeat Minstrel

The Craftsman's Club of Rondout Lodge, No. 343, F. and A. M., will give a repeat performance of their fourth annual minstrel show in the assembly hall of Trinity Lutheran Church, corner Spring and Hone streets, on Wednesday evening, January 14, under the auspices of Trinity Lutheran Men's Club. The advance sale of tickets indicate that the show will be largely attended, and Bill Smith, who again this year directs the show, expects that this performance will even be superior to the ones given at the Church of the Comforter Hall during the early part of last December.

THE PHONE BOOTH MURDER

by Phoebe Atwood Taylor

Chapter 38)

No More Clams!

"HUH!" Jennie said. "What a horrid man! I never did care much for men with pointed beards! Asey, was that how the person got away from upstairs last night, when we hunted around so? Did he use that chute?"

"That was Rankin," Asey said. "I think he was getting his conversion unit out of Miss Olive's blind, where he'd put it. He needed it for Horace. Then I spoke he stuck back in a hurry after shooting him, what hurt that when Jennie found it. When was you there, Jennie?"

"Just before you come back with Mrs. Clutterfield. Rankin was in the kitchen drinking coffee."

"Then you got it soon after he put it back," Asey said. "He left it there, because I think, Miss Olive, that he was sore with you, an' I think he hoped you might get involved. To pay you back for turnin' him down. What hurt that scheme was the weather. He did some fine plannin', but he couldn't account for them lights."

Asey smiled.

"I think you'll find he took the pincushion the time he killed Ann. He didn't want to stick it in his coat pocket, where it'd make a bulge. So after he got his raincoat after comin' downstairs, he stuck it in the pocket of that I looked, just now, an' the raincoat pocket's got a big hole. He forgot that, an' so the pincushion dropped out on the floor here."

"An' I did pick it up," Jennie looked triumphantly at Mrs. Doane. "Just like I said! Only Rankin took it out of your basket again!"

"He was most likely so anxious to get off with Judge Houghton, who sure made a nice reliable alibi," Asey said, "that he didn't discover about losin' the pincushion right off. My I was dumb!"

Solution R280

"HOW about Horace?" Cummings asked.

"Rankin must have got panicky about him. He got his forty-five an' unit, an' waited for him to come back. An' got him to stroll down to the bathroom, an' shot him. I think it was a lot later that he sneaked out the twenty-two from its case an' stuck it beside Horace. He had plenty of opportunity, with all of us, includin' him, huddled."

"Miss Olive," Mrs. Doane said, "where in the world were you last night?"

"Well," Miss Olive seemed a little embarrassed. "I—"

"Mrs. Clutterfield helped me guess that one," Asey said. "To tell you the truth, part of the plan thought up to impress Bram Reid with Ann's ability to handle this older role involved havin' Miss Olive an' Horace an' Bram Reid dine together. Then Miss Olive was to slip out, an' Ann, dressed in her clothes, was to slip back, the point bein' to prove to Bram Reid that Ann was a good actress. When Ann didn't turn up, Miss Olive an' Bram Reid got to talkin' about another play, an' the upshot of that was that the two of 'em went to Provincetown an' talked most of the night with the author. That's where Miss Olive was comin' back from when I spotted her this mornin'."

It was really an amazing thing for me to do, Miss Olive's cheeks thing like it before. And truly, Mrs. Doane, I'm sorry I upset you. Bram Reid said he'd be late, but he apparently phrased it badly. You see, this play had to do with my line of work."

"Schoolteachin'?" Jennie asked.

"Er—well—"

"She ain't a schoolteacher," Asey said.

"What!" Everyone in the room spoke in unison.

"Of course she is, Asey!" Jennie said severely. "Everyone knows it!"

"I knew she wasn't when I seen the books in her room," Asey said. "Asey, when I finally placed her name, like it was written in them books, I found myself wonderin' if maybe she hadn't killed Ann. There's a lot of difference between Miss Olive, a nice schoolteacher, an' O. E. Beadle, who invented Solution R280, that they was so busy talkin' about in Washington last week! I think Rankin hoped that the O. E. Beadle angle would make people suspicious of her."

"Miss Olive!" Freddy said. "What are you?"

"A chemist," Miss Olive said, and bit her lip. "I never meant to deceive you, really, but you just all took it for granted that I was a schoolteacher, and—well, people are more at home with schoolteachers, somehow. And Solution R280 isn't really a fair sample of my work, Mr. Mayot. That was really just an accident!"

"Uh-huh. Biggest new explosive anyone's invented in years, an' you make it sound like something you tossed off in your spare time! Now—"

Unfinished Letter

"WAIT, Mr. Mayo," Miss Olive said. "The key. What about the key in the pincushion?"

"You'll find that all up in Rankin's papers, an' I guess it's the part I didn't quite get from the bank. After Willem Allstadt died, Juanita had times when she was sort of odd. In some of the papers in her apartment there was a letter about a parade march an' out of Began. 'Dear Sister,' an' it said she was sendin' a pincushion to 'dear sister,' an' it was very important. The pincushion had belonged to mother—she'd mean your grandmother, Miss Olive—an' it was the key to a lot."

Maybe she forgot to finish it, maybe she decided not to, maybe it was in one of the periods when she was queer. Anyway, the pincushion got sent, an' the letter didn't. Seems, if she knew your mother's name, that she must have made some effort to find her sister. The bank'll solve the for you, anyways, an' know where it belongs—it's a vault key, an' I guess it'll probably prove who Juanita was, an' solve your claims."

"D'you think," Miss Olive said, "that after Rankin got that pincushion, perhaps he might have—"

"Killed you? I don't know. I'm sort of afraid he planned to," Asey said. "That's why I carried you off to Bill Porter's while I was away. I know one thing Rankin planned, though, after failin' to cut himself into the Allstadt money by gettin' either you or Ann to marry him. He wasn't ever goin' to reveal anythin' about either of you. He was goin' to leave you out in the cold an' get the money for himself. He was goin' to fake claims an' make himself the heir."

It was nearly five o'clock when the Porter, which Asey had wrenched with difficulty from Mrs. Clutterfield, rolled into the driveway of his home in Well-Hill.

"There's Cousin Hat at the door!" Jennie said. "Oh dear, Mrs. Doane's give me back the Inn clam business she took away last evenin', an' I knew Syl'll be glad, but I feel like a criminal, leavin' him with Cousin Hat so long! I ain't got to—everything's all right, Hat!"

"Well," Hat said, "Bill Porter just phoned. He's comin' for Asey at six. Got to go right back to Washin'ton, he says. An' Syl wonders if maybe Asey could do him a favor first?"

"What?" Asey asked.

"Well, they phoned from the Pennwinnick Inn, an' want some clams."

"No!" Asey said.

"But some of Mrs. Bemis's old boarders is havin' a reunion, an' they want chowder—guess you could deliver the clams, couldn't you, Asey?"

Asey and Jennie looked at each other, and Jennie shook her head.

"I wouldn't tempt fate!" she said. "Not after what I been through on this clam-deliverin' expedition!"

"But it ain't tourists! It's old, old boarders—"

"No, Hat," Asey said. "No. I might take a chance for tourists, if Jennie an' I learned one thing in the last twenty-three hours, it's that clam'n' perennial boarders don't mix."

Slover Is Home

West Shokan, Jan. 2.—George Batchford and Ralph B. Longyear of the township of Shandaken were business callers here Monday afternoon.

The civilian defense program for the town of Olive is getting under way with increasing vigor and determination.

Church services on Sunday afternoon drew a very favorable attendance with the Rev. John A. Wright in charge. Accompanying him were well-known Kingston musical talent, Thomas Crosby, Sr., organist; Charles Broadhead and R. B. Longyear, vocalists.

Larry Kelder up from Montclair, N. J., last week-end entertained as guests at Headacres his accompanying friends, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Chidister of Charleston, W. Va.

David Bender returned last Sunday from a holiday visit of several days with his parents in Cotoick.

Miss Edna Longyear of Shokan is arranging a Red Cross benefit party to be held in the basement of the Reformed Church Friday evening, January 9.

Saturday evening of this week installation of officers will be held at Shokan I. O. O. F. Lodge No. 491, Olive Bridge, in charge of District Deputy Ernest Shimer and staff of Catskill Mountain Lodge No. 487. The officers-elect are: Noble grand, Elmer F. Davis; vice grand, Frank D. Manley; recording secretary, Harlowe McLean; financial secretary, Virgil C. Gordon; treasurer, Arthur E. Trowbridge. Following the business session refreshments and a social program will be enjoyed. A large attendance is anticipated.

Miss Ollie Burgher entertained at a Christmas dinner homecoming, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Burger and son, Bruce of Kingston, and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Burgher of Mt. Tremper.

Lumberman Wilson Terwilliger and Edward Schwab are cutting and removing oak and beech logs from Sanford Bell's well timbered South Mountain lot.

Carpenter Orrie Ellsworth was employed at Head Acres Monday. Mrs. Etta Vogt of Oneonta has returned home after visiting her mother, Mrs. Carrie Weidner.

The town of Olive was again well represented at the annual supervisors' banquet held Monday evening in Kingston. Judge Lester S. Davis and ex-Superintendent of Highways Claude Bell were numbered in the group of approximately 20.

The Ladies' Aid Society members held their customary Wednesday church quilting and luncheon. Among those listed as present were President Mrs. Belle Burgher, Mrs. Florence Bell, Mrs. Anna Avery, Mrs. Blanche Rodriguez, Mrs. James Martin, Mrs. Kathryn Terwilliger, Mrs. Bertha Shimer, Pvt. Paul R. Slover of 26 Field Artillery Fort Bragg, N. C. is spending a 10-day furlough at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fisher of Maple Hill.

Mrs. Minnie Every, Mrs. Matie Davis.

The defense housing facilities census was taken last week in the West Shokan and Bushkill school districts respectively by canvassers, Mrs. James Burgher, Mrs. Kinne Cole, Mrs. Katherine Hesley, Mrs. Roy VanDemark and Mrs. Raymond Bell.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mooney of Kingston spent Christmas with her mother, Mrs. Martin J. Every, at the parsonage.

The recent rain has caused a decided raise in the water of the Ashokan west basin. However, the level yet remains many feet under normal.

Mr. and Mrs. William Colange and family were entertained Sunday evening for dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Richter.

Reports from Mrs. Jane Ann Burgher say that she is enjoying good health and happiness at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edna Moore, in Rutherford, N. J., where she is spending the winter.

Granted Divorce
Justice Pierce H. Russell has granted an interlocutory decree of divorce in the action brought by Paul B. St. Ours of Kingston against Agnes St. Ours. The action was tried on December 6 in Kingston. The parties were married on October 12, 1923 at Stone Ridge and custody of a child is given to the plaintiff. The specific act upon which the decree was granted allegedly took place at a hotel in the town of Hurley on July 1, 1940. Elmer H. Nathan appeared as counsel for the plaintiff.

MEMO TO ADVERTISERS

How you can be in a lot of places... at one time

If you could make regular, personal calls on your best customers and prospects and talk to them about your merchandise and service, that would be the most effective kind of selling.

Of course that is not possible but you can give a friendly, newsy talk about your business to the best families in our community through the advertising columns of this newspaper. You can describe your merchandise or service, quote prices and sell to a lot of people at one time.

But you wouldn't make a lot of personal calls at random, would you? It's just as important that you know where your advertising goes. That's the reason this newspaper is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, so we can give you audited facts and figures about our circulation—where, how much, how obtained, how much people pay for this paper and other essential information that you should know and have a right to know when you make an investment in advertising.

The Bureau is a cooperative association of 2000 publishers, advertising agencies and advertisers in the United States and Canada. Organized in 1914, its purpose is to furnish advertisers with verified information about the circulation of its publisher members.

The Bureau maintains a large staff of trained auditors who make an annual audit of the circulation records of each A.B.C. publication. With the facts thus obtained, published in A.B.C. reports, it becomes possible for advertisers to select media and buy space on the basis of known and verified circulation values.

Bin for License Plates To Be Put in Parking Area

A bin for the collection of automobile license plates which are being removed from cars when the 1942 license plate is substituted, will be erected in the parking grounds on Main street adjacent to the Motor Vehicle License Bureau and all license holders are asked to deposit their old plates in the bin. The old plates will be converted into defense materials. County Clerk Robert A. Snyder has also notified every supervisor in the county to designate some central depository in his town where license plates may be conveniently deposited by owners who find it inconvenient to bring their old plates to the deposit place in the city.

City Engineer's Records Show Lack of 1941 Rain

That Kingston had passed through an exceptionally dry year during 1941 is shown by the records in the city engineer's office which show that the total precipitation of rain during the past year was 27.62 inches, as compared with a rainfall of 40.51 inches during 1940.

The new year was ushered in on Tuesday with overcast skies and moderate temperatures, but toward night snow began falling in the city, and during the progress of the storm the street department began the work of sanding the hills and slippery street intersections.

The work of sanding was continued until the snow was followed by a downpour of rain. This morning during the early morning hours rain continued

'Y' Varsity Cagers Win Ninth Straight of Season, 30-29

Van Buren's Shot Decides Contest With Schatz Five

Crackers Edge Out Win Over Cairo, 26 to 24; Silverberg's Deuce Wins Battle

Coach Dick Thomas' Y. M. C. A. Varsity basketball aggregation went through another scare last night on the "Y" court in the game with the Schatz of Poughkeepsie. A last minute shot by "Bub" Van Buren, his only score of the game, won the contest for the local cagers by the score of 30 to 29. It was the locals' ninth straight win.

The Colonial City cagers took a 9 to 2 lead in the first quarter of the game. Then in the midway period, the Bridge City quintet rammed back and overtook Kingston 14 to 13 at the end of the first half.

Both teams continued the close play in the third and also in the final quarter. With only four minutes left to play in the last session, Poughkeepsie maintained a slim four point margin over the "Y" team.

Jess Shults and Eddie Bock found the range and gave the locals another look in. Finally, Van Buren won the game with his toss and the ninth triumph in a row for the club. The last two games for the Y. M. C. A. five have been thrillers all the way and they have been far from easy engagements.

Jess Shults kept on with his reckless scoring parade last night by collecting six fields and two fouls for a total of 14 points. Andy Streck of Poughkeepsie, topped all the scorers with 16.

In an overtime session the "Y" Crackers scored a 26 to 24 win over Cairo last night in the preliminary to the Varsity-Poughkeepsie clash. George Silverberg, towering center for the local quintet, tied the game with his toss and later put it into the records as a win for the Kingston outfit. George led both teams in scoring with 10 markers.

This was another close battle all the way. Cairo had a 14 to 12 lead at the end of the half but failed to increase this in the final two sessions. Kingston hit back strong in the waning sessions of the game to pull it out of the fire.

Following Silverberg in the scoring column, came Ed Allen and Jack Kelse with six apiece. Andy Swilpa made eight for the losing team.

Three more big games are scheduled for the Varsity team. Monday night the team travels to Albany. Friday the Y. M. C. A. will play hosts to the Castleton American Legion team at the Broadway court. The following night, Saturday, Albany plays a return game here.

Doyle Won't Quote Odds Yet on 1942 Pennant Winners

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 3 (AP)—Baseball's too uncertain this year for Jack Doyle to be quoting odds yet, but the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Yankees look like pennant winners to the Broadway betting commissioner.

"The game is more unpredictable now than it ever has been before," he explained today. "The important factor is the effect of the war. Uncle Sam will be the big player next season."

Usually ready by this time to list his early prices—considered the last word by those who follow the big league races—Doyle is holding off now until he can learn which players will be called into the army.

He indicated he will have a line by the time the season opens. "Remember, no matter how much we know," Doyle said, "the dominating factor is luck. And it is my belief that over a space of time the breaks even themselves out."

Ruth in Hospital
New York, Jan. 3 (AP)—Babe Ruth, baseball's former home run king, was taken to a hospital from his Riverside Drive apartment early today in a private ambulance. He was accompanied by his wife and daughter, who later said he had been taken to an unnamed hospital for a "routine checkup."

The apartment house doorman said, however, that Ruth had been carried to the ambulance on a stretcher and appeared to be "a very sick man."

Tourney to Open
Los Angeles, Jan. 3 (AP)—Sam Snead, Johnny Bulla, Tony Penna and Herman Barron arrived on the scene of the $10,000 Los Angeles Open Tournament yesterday and two of them proceeded to fire sub-par golf in practice rounds. Penna tied himself to a 67, four under par, and Snead had a 68. Bulla, last year's winner, turned in a 75. Another arrival was Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament manager. The tourney opens Friday.

Winners of Professional League Meet All Stars in New York Sunday; Money to Navy

New York, Jan. 3 (AP)—Chicago's professional football Bears, who got in the first kick of the 1941 campaign against the College All-Stars, will apply the finishing touches to the national gridiron picture tomorrow against a picked squad from their own play-for-pay league.

Shunted across the country by the war, the post-season struggle is the fourth in a series of annual affairs between the National League champs and the outstanding players from the loop's nine other teams.

Three previous games on the Pacific coast all resulted in defeat for the all-star clubs, but this season's outfit is rated as stronger than its predecessors. For that matter, so are the Bears.

That is why more than 40,000 customers are expected to troop into the Polo grounds at a top of $4.40 a head, with half of the gross going to the Navy Relief Society.

Crackers Edge Out Win Over Cairo, 26 to 24; Silverberg's Deuce Wins Battle

Coach Dick Thomas' Y. M. C. A. Varsity basketball aggregation went through another scare last night on the "Y" court in the game with the Schatz of Poughkeepsie. A last minute shot by "Bub" Van Buren, his only score of the game, won the contest for the local cagers by the score of 30 to 29. It was the locals' ninth straight win.

The Colonial City cagers took a 9 to 2 lead in the first quarter of the game. Then in the midway period, the Bridge City quintet rammed back and overtook Kingston 14 to 13 at the end of the first half.

Both teams continued the close play in the third and also in the final quarter. With only four minutes left to play in the last session, Poughkeepsie maintained a slim four point margin over the "Y" team.

Jess Shults and Eddie Bock found the range and gave the locals another look in. Finally, Van Buren won the game with his toss and the ninth triumph in a row for the club. The last two games for the Y. M. C. A. five have been thrillers all the way and they have been far from easy engagements.

Jess Shults kept on with his reckless scoring parade last night by collecting six fields and two fouls for a total of 14 points. Andy Streck of Poughkeepsie, topped all the scorers with 16.

BOWLING

K. B. A. Meets
Notes on Kingston Bowling Association executive committee meeting held last night at the Y. M. C. A.

The association voted to join with thousands of other A. B. C. sanctioned leagues and city associations throughout the country in paying part or the entire prize funds in defense stamps and bonds.

The local association voted to pay 50 per cent of the annual city tournament prizes in defense stamps and bonds and will recommend that all leagues in its jurisdiction do likewise.

Peter Keresman, president of local group, was elected delegate to the annual A. B. C. convention in Columbus, O., on March 27.

Preliminary plans for the annual city championship tournament were discussed. The committee has decided that henceforth eight alleys will be required for the tournament competition.

Winner-Loser

Bedford, Ind. — Raymond Motzinger of Salem, in a contest, won an order on a Bedford salesroom for a new automobile.

He bought 1942 license plates, sold his old car, came here on a bus, only to be told he couldn't have the new machine because of the government's wartime ban on sales.

Now Motzinger is out the cost of new plates.

Hartford, Conn. — A foreign-born American citizen said "thank you" with a $600 gift to the American Red Cross for helping his family during a 1936 flood.

Ten Eyck Waives Examination for Grand Jury Probe

Too many wives are causing Franklin G. Ten Eyck, 31, who gave his address as 46 Grand street, considerable trouble, as he found when he was arraigned today before Judge Matthew V. Cahill in police court charged with abandonment of his three-month-old boy. He waived examination on the charge and was held for the grand jury; the amount of bail to be fixed in county court.

Ten Eyck was arrested at Hackensack, N. J., on Wednesday and held for the local police on a warrant that had been sworn out by Mrs. Grace Wagner Ten Eyck who alleged that she was married to Ten Eyck in July, 1940, at Leesburg, Va.

When Ten Eyck was arraigned on the abandonment charge in police court on New Year's Day another warrant charging him with perjury was lodged against him by District Attorney N. Le Van Haver, and on the perjury charge he waived examination and was held for the grand jury with bail fixed at $2,500.

Since then Ten Eyck, unable to furnish bail, has been a prisoner in the county jail.

New Year's Day, Ten Eyck said he desired a preliminary hearing on the abandonment charge as he claimed he had made a "verbal agreement" with his wife.

This morning the district attorney's office was represented by Attorney Richard Overbagh, who asked for a 10-days' adjournment but Ten Eyck after considering the matter said he would waive examination.

It is understood that the grand jury will consider the Ten Eyck case next week when it convenes at the court house.

The perjury charge arose when Ten Eyck appeared at the city clerk's office in the city hall December 12, with Miss Eleanor Shurtz of this city and obtained a marriage license. They were wed later at St. John's Church.

This morning the first wife, Mrs. Grace Wagner Ten Eyck and the baby were in police court to press the abandonment charge against her husband.

At the time she applied for a warrant for the arrest of her husband in December the police investigated her claim that she had married Ten Eyck in July, 1940, and from the result of the investigation the warrant charging abandonment was issued.

City Tire Board Gives Rules to Be Followed

emphasized the fact that no car owner should go to the office in the city hall to make application for purchases of a new tire until he had first visited a tire dealer for an inspection of his old tire and received the certificate that his old tire is beyond repair. This application may be made to your usual tire dealer who will have the necessary blanks next week.

Should the tire dealer find that the worn tire can be repaired, re-treaded or recapped no certificate for the purchase of a new tire will be issued. If the tire is beyond repair and the applicant comes within the very restricted of the city hall, a certificate will be issued for presenting to the local rationing office in the city hall.

Since the Ulster county quota is so small, the issuance of certificates for new tires must be closely restricted and limited to absolute necessity.

The full set of rules announced by the board follows:

An office will be open on the third floor of the city hall for the purpose of receiving application.

All local tire dealers and garages will have the necessary instructions and applications for those who are permitted by law to have the new tires. The members pointed out that it must be remembered that applicants for new tires should go to one of these local tire dealers to secure an application at which time the dealer will, in accordance with the law, inspect the tire which the applicant is desirous of replacing.

The applicant should then take his application, together with the inspection report furnished by the dealer, to the office of the local board.

Please note carefully the following categories. These are the only people who can secure tires under the law!

Please remember, the local board has no discretion!

Price Bill Is Ready For Senate Debate

Measure Designed as One Empowering Henderson to Halt Profiteering

Washington, Jan. 3 (AP)—A flexible wartime price control measure—designed to save the government billions of dollars and protect the public from soaring living costs—was ready today for Senate consideration.

Affecting virtually every phase of the nation's commercial life, the bill seemed sure of arousing as heated a controversy as any similar legislation which cleared the House last November 28.

Members of the Senate Banking Committee worked until after dark last night to complete their draft of the bill, although the first session of the 77th Congress already was ended. Congress reconvenes Monday, but leaders indicated that Senate debate on the measure would not begin before Wednesday.

Senator Brown (D-Mich.), who will serve as floor manager for the bill, said it would aid the all-out war effort by stabilizing prices of everything from "guns to butter" and would strike directly at profiteering, speculation, inflation and hoarding.

President Roosevelt asked Congress more than six months ago for price control legislation. Meanwhile, Leon Henderson has been acting as price administrator, through executive orders.

Brown said the bill prepared for Senate consideration was stronger than the version passed by the House because it "contains much more definite authority" and seeks to hold all prices to levels of the period October 1-15, with a few exceptions.

"This is not an overall price-fixing attempt," he explained. "It is a selective control measure where the price administrator may fix maximums if he has reason to believe that any prices are getting out of line."

Legion Supports First Aid Class

Courses Slated to Start Next Tuesday Night

Kingston's American Legion organization will be responsible for a First Aid class, and will offer its full support and cooperation in the formation of such a unit, according to a statement issued today by Eugene P. MacConnell, the chairman in charge of this unit.

Dr. L. E. Sanford, will supervise the progress of this unit, but actual instruction will be carried on by Frank Phinney.

This class will meet every Tuesday evening, at 7:30 p. m., at the Legion Memorial building, 18 West O'Reilly street, beginning on Tuesday, January 6.

Mr. MacConnell stated that each study session will last two hours instead of the usual one hour, due to the pressing need of time. The complete course will be terminated in 10 weeks with the award of certificates on satisfactory qualification.

The entire First Aid Unit, said Mr. MacConnell, is composed of members of the Kingston Post 150, of the American Legion, and so that satisfactory progress may be made, the size of this unit has been limited and is composed entirely of volunteers.

Republican Cooperation Is Pledged by Joseph Martin

Leader of G.O.P. House Delegation Says This Is Time for Help, Not Abuse

Washington, Jan. 3 (AP)—A pledge of full Republican cooperation in prosecution of the war effort coupled with a promise to call attention to "honest mistakes" came today from Joseph W. Martin, national chairman of the party and leader of the Republican House delegation.

"This is not the time for abuse or criticism; it's a time for pointing out," the Massachusetts representative said upon his return to the capitol for the start of a new session of Congress Monday.

"We, like everybody else, are 100 per cent for winning this war but, like they do in England, we will reserve the right to comment when it can honestly be done."

"The party of the opposition is of the great importance."

Martin already had postponed a meeting of state Republican chairmen originally called for next week to start preparing for the November congressional elections. He said today, however, that parley and a meeting of the Republican national committee might be held in the spring.

Martin declined to make any predictions about the results of the congressional elections, although several months ago he asserted that Republicans would gain control of the House and would pick up several seats in the Senate.

"It would be foolish to make any guesses now because so many things could happen between now and next November," he said.

Some legislators meanwhile expressed their belief that the sitting members would have a better-than-usual chance to be selected unless the fortunes of war should turn more heavily against the United States for a time, setting up bitter reaction to preparedness steps Congress already has taken. The Democrats now have sizeable majorities in both chambers.

Martin said he probably would call a conference of Republican House members within a week or two to take stock of the situation "back home" regarding the war and methods of prosecuting it.

He joined other high-ranking House members in predicting speedy congressional approval of whatever appropriations President Roosevelt may ask and as steep a tax program as the ways and means committee might recommend.
